Carl Allen Fields, whose contributions to the vocational and celucational guidance of students from the elementary to the college level are bringing bim national recognition as one of education's most creative workers with youth and minority groups. Next week this 49-year-old native of Columbus, Ohio, after four years of outstanding service in administering a selfhelp program involving 45% of Princeton's undergraduate body and representing some 52,7 million annually, will assume even broader responsibilities as Assistant Dean of the College — a position in which he will have added opportunities to strengthen relationships between the community and the university.

tionships between the community and the university, Several months ago in "University: A Princeton Quarterly," Fields caught the attention of educators across the country with a thoughtful, low-keyed article entitled "One University's Response to Today's Negro Student," It was Fields' thesis: No university can assume that the "Negro student today is willing or able to accept all of the values of the dominant white culture at the cost of his own sub-cultural roots. There must be an ever-broadening understanding of and respect for the real supportive values of his sub-culture, and a sincere, creative effort to supply elements of it in the college and community environment to reinforce the Negro student. Ways must be available in which the Negro student can translate his education into meaningful ways to help those less fortunate than himself'

For almost a quarter-century Fields has been active in all faces of guidance and job placement, working with students and adults, including school "drop-outs," screams of the Armed Forces and workers displaced because of job obsolescence or automation. In his years at Princeton, where he has been absorbed with his University assignments, he has been constantly drawn into the world of the community 'teen-ager, sometimes by adults, more often by youth themselves. This past winter, for instance, he performed what one observer called an "invaluable service" in taking a hard look as the Princeton Youth Center, analyzing its role and making a variety of suggestions for its governing board.

At the time of his Princeton appointment in 1961 Fields was Director of Education for the New York Urban League, He had previously been Field Supervisor in the National Deleuse Education Act Guidance Institute, Teachers College, New York, and, from 1930 through 1962 had been Vocational Counsellor, Bureau of Child Guidance, New York Board of Education,

In the year ahead on the Dean's level Fields, the first Negro in the history of St. John's University, Brooklyn, to be elected to the honor society and to the captainty of the varsity track team, will continue to direct the Sponsor Parents Program for black freshmen which he and others designed as an ellective way of introducing each incoming black freshman to a black family in the Princeton community. He will also have general oversight of all surdents on academic probation, will coordinate the efforts of campus comselling offices and inform students of all commelting possibilities available, and chair a new committee to provide special help for the growing number of black students at the University.

For understanding that today's youth have matured to Lest that "at 16 they are at a period comparable to the 21-car-old of 10 to 15 years ago; for opening up to students of all ages "possibilities which may never have occurred to them before;" for emphasizing that "education must not become the divider of the black community but must help unite all in progressive improvement." he is TOWN TOPICS nominee as

What does it avail me to work for the Humane Society and Princeton Small Animal Rescue League if a founder of the League contracts for transportation of 200 or more dogs.
From Arkansas to Princeton, N. J. — and conditions of trans-portation are so cruel that it remained for a passerby to no-tify the authorities?

These animals, according to the paper, were consigned to AME Associates for animal re-search — whose head is Dr. Russell S. Edmonds, Jr., stat-ed as a founder of the Prince-ton Small Animal Rescue League

Dr. Edmonds is queted as saying that the AME has "no control over conditions of animals during shipment, but that there are federal controls." I would appreciate if you could indicate the source of these federal controls so that I may communicate with the authorities involved.

I would have preferred to discuss this matter first with Dr. Edmonds of AME but his office said he was not availa-ble for comment. So, it can happen, right here in Princeton.

MRS. CHARLES H. TEALL 15 Greenview Ave.

Editor's Note: Further information on federal controls regulating interstate transportation of animals should be available from the Mercer County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals or from the office of Congressman Frank Thompson, Jr.

A tighter definition of "manufacturing" should be written into the Township zoning ordinance, in the opinion of W. Joseph Shinn, zoning officer for the Township.

Aunt Abigail's, the Fifth Avenue fashion store in Flemington, New Jersey, is having a sale that takes on Summer's ways.
